4B8 Independent Study

4B8A The purpose of Independent Study courses is to fulfill a student's immediate need beyond their control to study independently in order to meet a specific requirement for of their degree, certificate, major or for transfer. (note: This is inaccurate as the independent study may, in fact, provide an opportunity that increases the student's ability to transfer get an internship or other aspect of competition with regards to work or transfer. – this is the reality of special research projects as well as the work students do in various courses which gives them hands on practical experience with artifacts, work in a field of science or experience in an advanced application of art, science, anthropology etc that is individually tailored. In the last 4 years we have had 46 students participate in Bio B21 and all 46 have transferred, in addition to getting internships and other factors that make them a more desirable transfer candidate to the more competitive c4-year colleges the previous language was adequate -4B8A The purpose of Independent Study courses is to fulfill a student's need to meet a specific requirement of their major or for transfer.

4B8B Independent Study courses will be conducted by qualified faculty in accordance with the course outline of record,(note this course outline is purposefully broad to accommodate a variety of needs and topics requisite to the course of study) to permit students to cover course material independently, but under the supervision and direction of the assigned faculty. These courses must be recommended by the Curriculum Committee and the College President and approved by the Board of Trustees. (Note: in these independent study courses the student is usually checking in to get help and achieve increasingly complicated outcomes)

4B8C Academic standards applicable to courses labeled Independent Study shall be the same as those applied to other credit and non-credit courses.

4B8D Students enrolled in Independent Study courses will be evaluated, and their progress and grades recorded in the same manner as students enrolled in other courses. Grades earned by in Independent Study courses will provide the appropriate documentation for purposes of state apportionment. (note: this statement sounds as though faculty must do something different for these courses than for others removing this statement about apportionment, which is covered in 4B8I adequately address this issue.)

4B8E Faculty conducting Independent Study shall certify that adequate and proper progress toward accomplishment of the student learning outcomes is and has been maintained by the student.

4B8F Faculty conducting Independent Study shall, as a minimum, make themselves available to students in the same manner as for students in other courses, including use of scheduled office hours.

4B8G Instructors of Independent Study shall:

1. Meet the same standards used for qualifying other instructors for a teaching assignment.
2. Be held responsible for supervision, control, and evaluation of enrolled students, and shall participate in independent study evaluation as in other courses.
3. Provide orientation, guidance, and other information relevant to the Independent Study course to the students enrolled.
4. Provide each Independent Study student with the instructor's consultation schedule. This schedule is to be included in the written record of student progress required by Title 5, Section 55234.

4B8H The method of instruction for Independent Study shall be outlined and reviewed with the student by the supervising faculty assigned, with the student being held accountable on a regular basis for the material that has been assigned.

4B8I Attendance for Independent Study must be reported as outlined in the State Student Accounting Manual.
