From Corrections to College

On March 30, 2017, The Opportunity Institute and Bakersfield College partnered to host the first meeting to Serve Our Formerly Incarcerated Students.

The Renewing Communities Project works with colleges and universities, in addition to community organizations and the courts, to serve formerly and currently incarcerated individuals with the goal of enrolling them in college and making those them productive members of society and reduce the rate of recidivism.

Mayor Karen Goh welcomed community partners and members of the justice system including CDCR, Lerdo Jail, and the Parole Dept. Chelsea Esquibias of Bakersfield College, Dr. Jacqueline Mimms of CSUB, and Lisa Stephens of Cerro Coso presented on their school's initiatives. The meeting allowed the community to partner with the colleges to build student success for our justice involved students. Thank you to the California Community Colleges Chancellor's Office for attending and the continuous support.

Cesar Chavez Legacy Award Winner Chancellor Emeritus Sandra Serrano

On Friday, March 31, 2017, I had the privilege of introducing the recipient of the first Cesar Chavez Legacy Award, our Chancellor Emeritus, Sandra Serrano. With a strong legal mind, a compassionate heart, and passion for education, there was no one better suited to influence our higher educational community than Sandra. Her educational leadership is a gift; her work for the community at the local, regional, state and national levels is emblematic of education in service to others. Thousands of lives have been touched by her work.

1st Annual Public Health Hackathon Takes Place at BC

Local students from both BC and CSUB came together in collaboration to create teams for the first annual BC Public Health Hackathon. This interdisciplinary competition engaged students and professionals from various backgrounds in Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics and non-STEM fields, local centers of higher education, community, industry, and the public. First place was awarded to “Down with Depression” for developing an app that gives accurate information on how to fight depression. Second place was awarded to “Safe Searches” for a website developed to give LGBTQ communities a resource to find supportive doctors. And 3rd place went to “MentalMapper’s” for an app that stimulates brain activity to improve cognitive functions for patients with neurological disorders. Events like these are a venue for students to show their skills and give back to the community.

Accreditation Conference

The Kern Community College District and Bakersfield College attended the ACCJC Conference in Irvine, California. We were well represented with Trustee Bill Thomas, Chancellor Tom Burke, and Vice Chancellor, John Means, alongside individuals from the three campuses. There were focused sessions for CEO's and Trustees on Standard IV, including requirements with a special emphasis on IV.C.

The conference explored multiple ways in which we work together to ensure that each student's experience is life changing. Participating faculty learned a great deal about student learning outcomes and student achievement, including best practices in the field.

MESA STEM Pre-Health Conf.

Bakersfield College, in collaboration with UCLA's Médicos, Enfermeros y Dentistas Para El Pueblo (MEDPEP) and UCLA

Undergraduate Admissions, hosted the 1st Annual MESA Bakersfield College Science, Technology, Engineering, Math (STEM) and Pre-Health Conference on Saturday, April 1st, 2017.

Most MESA students are the first in their families to attend college and this one-day conference inspired students and offered them opportunities to network with different health/STEM professionals, health system agencies, college advisors, financial aid counselors, and student organizations who want to mentor students in these fields. Students were also encouraged to pursue the health care profession or STEM career that best matches their interest and talents.
