11/3/2022	Police Science	The Police Science degree builds specific skills for law enforcement officers as part of the upper division requirements. These same skills are also required for all law enforcement officer academies. Specifically, this program will train students to perform the duties of police officers, sheriff deputies, and public security officers. These include patrol and investigative activities, public relations, witness interviewing, evidence collection and management, basic crime prevention methods, computer forensics and investigations report preparation, forensic psychology and other law enforcement responsibilities.
